“These organizations are outstanding examples of companies that value their employees and have worked hard to create a positive, productive organizational culture. These organizations stress respect, honesty, and communication to keep their employees engaged and excited with their jobs. These smart people practices make the difference between good companies and great companies.”

— Susan R. Meisinger, president and CEO of the Society for Human Resource Management

Johnston McLamb is proud to announce that it has been named as the 10th best small company to work for in the nation by the Great Places to Work Institute (GPTWI) in its annual Top 50 Small and Medium Companies to Work for in America competition. This is the third year that the award—sponsored by the Society for Human Resource Management (SHRM)—has been given, and Johnston McLamb is one of only a handful of small businesses that have been named to this prestigious list each year.

Of the awards, GPTWI co-founder Robert Levering said, “The companies on this list set the standards for all workplaces. They show that companies can become successful by creating an environment where employees trust their management, have pride in their work, and have positive relationships with their co-workers.”

SHRM is the world’s largest association devoted to human resource management. Representing more than 185,000 individual members located in more than 100 countries, their mission is to serve the needs of HR professionals by providing the most essential and comprehensive resources available.

GPTWI is a research and management consultancy based in San Francisco, CA, with affiliates in more than 20 countries. GPTWI produces other “Best Companies To Work For” lists, including Fortune’s 100 Best Companies To Work For. The institute uses a variety of employee assessment tools and educational methods to further its goal of building a better society by helping companies transform their workplaces.

“This recognition is a tribute to all of our employees who are committed to working together to make Johnston McLamb the best place to work in the country,” says Dick McLamb, Executive Vice President and COO.

Adds Ron Johnston, the company’s President and Chief Executive Officer, “Our focus on being a great place to work not only benefits our employees but our customers as well. We are able to attract and retain some of the best talent in our industry who are highly motivated to deliver top-quality services and work products to our clients.”
